

Use this when you visit a kitchen, stall, or cafe. Read the 60-second opener first. If they have two minutes, walk the full pitch, then show the phone.

No fee

Posting complementary meals is free for restaurant partners — forever.

You stay in control

You choose the dish, the quantity, and you can close a listing anytime.

Simple pickup

They scan a QR at your counter. You hand over the food. No extra confirmation.

01 60-second opener (door / phone)

Hi, I'm from UDUFood. We help Singapore restaurants turn leftover food into complementary meals for people nearby who need them.

You post what you have — leftover rice, a few portions, end-of-day dishes. People living or working within 500 metres of your shop can claim one meal a day by scanning a QR code in the app. You don't take orders, you don't process payment, and there is no fee to join or to post.

You stay in control: you choose the dish, the quantity, and you can close the listing anytime. If someone doesn't show up, you tap No-show and that portion goes back so someone else can claim it.

Can I show you how it looks on the phone? It takes about two minutes.

02 What UDUFood is

UDUFood is a Singapore app that turns surplus food into complementary meals. Never call them “free meals” — always complementary meals.

Restaurant

You post leftover portions, display a QR, and hand over the food.

Receiver

Someone nearby browses listings and claims one complementary meal per day.

Donor

A supporter can sponsor meals at your restaurant. They pay; you prepare for pickup.

ONE-LINE LEAVE-BEHIND

UDUFood — list leftover portions as complementary meals. Nearby people claim with a QR. You stay in control. No fee.

03 The problem (15 seconds)

Every day, good food is left over. Throwing it away costs you money and doesn't help anyone. At the same time, people nearby need a proper meal.

04 How it works for the restaurant (90 seconds)

1 Sign up

Register with your phone number, restaurant details, and UEN. Our team checks the account — usually 1–2 business days. After approval, you can post.

2 Post a listing

From Home, tap Post. Enter dish name, category, quantity (packs, portions, boxes...), an optional photo, and a schedule: one-time, every day, or custom days.

3 Display the QR

When you post, the app creates a QR code for that listing. Put it at the counter or print it. That is what the receiver scans.

4 They claim, you hand over

A receiver nearby sees your listing, comes in, and scans the QR. The claim is instant — you do not confirm each person. The app already checks they are within 500 metres and have not claimed today (limit: 1 per Singapore calendar day).

5 Today's claims board

Open Claims to see who claimed today. Mark Collected when they pick up. If they don't come, mark No-show and the portion returns to the pool.

6 Close anytime

If you run out or want to stop, open the listing and tap Close. You can reactivate it later.

05 A typical day (story they can picture)

3:30 pm

Kitchen has 8 portions of chicken rice left. Staff opens UDUFood, taps Post: "Chicken rice, 8 portions, today only." QR goes on the counter.

4–7 pm

People nearby see it in the app, come in, scan, collect. Each person can claim once today. Staff glances at Claims if needed.

7:30 pm

6 collected, 2 no-shows. Staff taps No-show on those two. If nothing is left, they Close the listing.

Next day

If it's a regular leftover, they can set it to Every day so they don't retype it.

Close the pitch

You choose what to share, how much, and when. No extra staff workflow, no fee, no payment handling. Surplus food helps someone nearby instead of going in the bin.

06 Live demo (walk them through the phone)

Do this on a restaurant account. Pause after each step. If you also have a receiver phone, show browse nearby, then scan.

STEP	WHAT YOU SAY	WHAT THEY SEE
1	This is your Home. Today's numbers sit here — posted, claimed, remaining.	Restaurant dashboard
2	Tap Post. This is all you fill in — name, quantity, photo, how often.	Post donation form
3	After you post, you get a QR. Put this at the counter.	QR after posting
4	Manage is your list. Active, past, inactive. Close or edit anytime.	Donation list
5	Claims is today's board. Collected, or No-show if they don't come.	Today's claims
6	That's the whole daily loop: post, display QR, hand over food, tick collected.	—

07 If they push back

Will this disrupt service?

No extra confirmation per customer. They scan, you hand over — same as giving a takeaway.

Is there a fee?

No. Posting complementary meals and receiving sponsored orders is free for restaurant partners.

Who is coming into my shop?

People with a UDUFood receiver account, within 500 m, one claim per day. Not an open public queue.

What if they don't show?

Mark No-show. That portion can be claimed again.

What if I run out?

Close the listing. Nothing else is shown as available.

Food safety / leftover quality?

You decide what to list and how much. List only food you would still serve.

Do I need to confirm every claim?

No. The scan is the claim. You only mark collected or no-show on the board.

How long to go live?

Register today. Approval is usually 1–2 business days. Then you can post the same day you are approved.

Language to use

Always say complementary meal — never “free meal.” Always say UDUFood. Do not over-promise donor PayNow unless that feature is live. Contact: support@udufood.com
